

2021
ANNUAL REPORT

BELIEVE BIG
Face It. Fight It. Overcome It.™

Today, 1 in 2 men and 1 in 2.4 women will hear “you have cancer” in their lifetime. Cancer is also affecting children at an increased rate of almost 40% in the past decade. The good news is that Believe Big is working to change these statistics and has become a trusted guide in the world of cancer. This past year because of your prayers, time, and financial support we were able to help over 300,000 individuals move through the overwhelming process of treatment. Believe Big bridges the gap between conventional and complementary medicine to help patients heal in all aspects of life, not just physically, but emotionally and spiritually as well.

We are seeing the fulfillment of our vision by helping patients and their families find their pathway to healing. Thank you for walking on this journey with us! I know you will be encouraged by the impact your support is making as you read the pages that follow.

Keep Believing Big!

Sincerely,

Ivelisse Page,
Executive Director & Co-Founder

OUR FOUNDERS

After facing, fighting, and overcoming stage IV colon cancer, Ivelisse Page wanted to reach out to other patients facing the many challenges she encountered through her cancer journey. After assembling a team of doctors and accumulating extensive research, Ivelisse and her husband, Jimmy, compiled reliable resources to heal the whole person physically, spiritually, mentally and emotionally. They established Believe Big in 2011 to help families bridge the gap between conventional and complementary medicine for fighting cancer.

CLINICAL TRIAL

"Ever since I was a child, I dreamed of merging eastern and western medicine; Embracing that complementary approach all through medical school at Harvard and my residency, fellowship and research at Johns Hopkins, I have carved a path of avoiding all hype about complementary medicine and focused only on rigorous testing to the same standards to which we hold pharmaceutical companies.

Believe Big has made this rigorous testing possible with mistletoe. It is an honor for me to be a part of this research team. And, I'm excited to share with you tonight that the Phase 1 of the groundbreaking Mistletoe Clinical trial has been completed! I am excited to share with you that we have found the maximum tolerated dose which is the recommended dose to proceed with for the next phase of studies, called phase II. Our team also designed the phase 1 trial to get a preliminary impression of whether mistletoe could help kill tumor cells in humans and whether it would also help improve patients' quality of life.

I am excited to share with you that not only has intravenous mistletoe therapy proven to be safe for cancer patients, but the initial data is showing improved quality of life as well.

As the trial was just completed, our next steps are to start evaluating the data on our secondary objectives. Specifically, we are going to look at how mistletoe impacts cancer in the patient's body by looking at tumor marker kinetics, markers of inflammation, and assessments of quality of life.

As we learn more in the upcoming months, Believe Big will keep you informed on these additional findings. I am especially gratified because when a publication comes out of Johns Hopkins that there is a safe dose to proceed with future phase II studies, the broader medical community will listen, and others may also find ways to study this drug. This breakthrough has been made possible because of Believe Big and you. Without your help, this level of rigorous research would not have been possible. Thank you! And not to let you off the hook, to push this to the next level we are going to need more help if we are going to do more clinical trials.

This phase 1 trial is the first step in making Mistletoe Therapy a part of Standard of Care in oncology so it may be covered by insurance and available to all patients for whom it may make a difference, not only for those in a position to pay out of pocket.

The next phase is called phase 2 and it focuses on activity of the drug. In other words, it focuses on how the activity of mistletoe in a cancer patient's body affects the growth of cancer cells and quality of life. Now that we are going to publish the maximum tolerated dose and recommended phase II dosing, we are able to start to investigate the best tumor type(s) for phase 2 and the niche where it is going to have the greatest impact.

Thank you again for your support!

Dr. Channing Paller delivered the update on the clinical trial at the Annual Believe Big Fundraising Dinner.

GIVING TESTIMONY

Our family has had a relationship with Believe Big for many years now and have had the pleasure of supporting this wonderful organization in many ways. We have always been so moved listening to the success stories and watching how this organization has changed the lives of so many through providing additional care options and resources outside of conventional medicine.

Supporting and becoming involved with Believe Big is something that every member of our family is passionate about and involved with. Even our youngest son, Camden, was so moved by a boy named Micah's story that he came home with ideas on how we could support his journey.

We hope you will join our family and the countless other families who support Believe Big and their mission of helping others face, fight and overcome cancer.

BELIEVE BIG INSTITUTE OF HEALTH

The Believe Big Institute of Health will be a culmination of searching worldwide for innovative oncology assessment and treatment. Though integrative oncology programs do exist in academic institutions around the country, Believe Big has seen through the years how they fall short of offering a truly integrative approach that can change cancer outcomes. We are in the beginning stages of creating an institute of health where health-minded individuals will come for a full evaluation to prevent a cancering process and cancer patients can find everything they need to heal in one place.

We are a warm and inviting Christian community that will welcome guests of all faiths, backgrounds, and gender identities. We are respectful of each person's beliefs, while at the same time, being true to who we are.

Wellness Innovation / Mind, Body & Soul

- Health minded individuals will be able to come for a wellness retreat, to gain valuable insight into their metabolic state, and go home with an effective plan to help them thrive
- Wellness cafe offering therapeutic cooking classes
- Luxury spa and non-toxic aesthetic medicine
- Prevention of disease and enhancement of longevity through biohacking with therapeutic nutrition, targeted movement and physical fitness, biofeedback, hot and cold conditioning, and light therapies
- Personalized wellness programs including genetic testing, clinical laboratory evaluation, acupuncture, chiropractic care, personal training, and more
- A conducive environment to quiet one's spirit, leave the demands of daily life, and be free to seek and deepen a spiritual connection with Christ

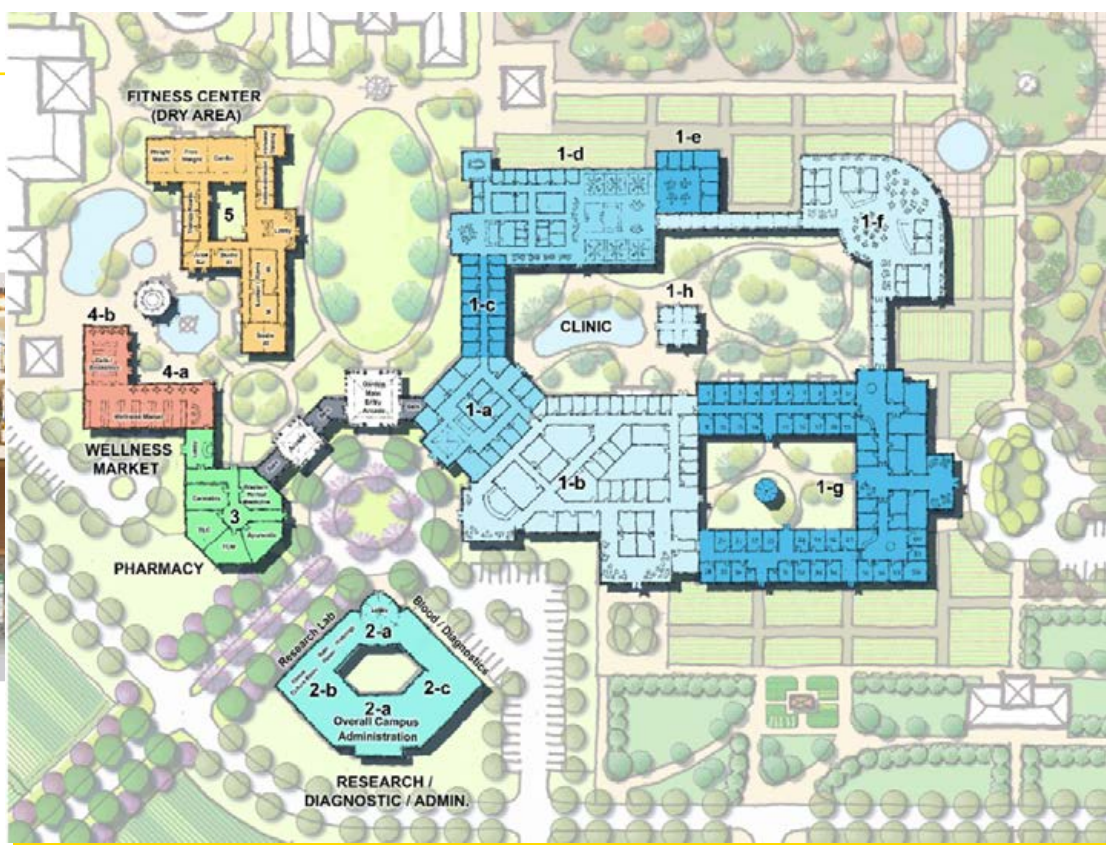

Patient Care

We exist to upgrade the "standard of care" for cancer by moving from the trial and error approach inherent in set protocols:

1. EVALUATE - Before undergoing any treatment, we assess patients' complete biomedical workup, epigenetic blueprint, personal and family history, and lifestyle influences that contributed to or are driving their disease process.

Right: A small portion of the proposed development plans.

2. TRANSLATE - Our unique ability to translate this information can take the guesswork out of treatment and guide patients to use the correct medications and interventions at the right time throughout their treatment.

3. TREAT - Patients will have access to vetted and research-supported therapies along with re-envisioned standard of care in one place.

4. INFORM - The data and analytics from our research will provide scientific evidence to inform cancer treatment for practitioners and patients well beyond our walls.

Our Mission: To stop cancer from stopping you.

Our Vision: A world where cancer creates an opportunity and invitation to heal.

Currently The Believe Big Institute of Health is a virtual network of practitioners working together to deliver this approach to treatment and prevention. Visit Believe Big's growing list of practitioners to gain access to this care now while we bring the physical campus to life.

STORIES OF HOPE

KEVIN FORSYTH, STAGE 4 COLON CANCER OVERCOMER

Healing is a collaboration. It's not a doctor telling you what you need to do and you're doing exactly what the doctor says. You have to be educated, you have to understand the process and have considered all of your options in that process.

I'm Kevin Forsyth, I'm 65 years old. We live here in Birmingham, Alabama. I live here with my amazing wife, Sandy Brown Forsyth. I have three adult sons and their growing families. I work in Forsyth Consulting, which is our family business here. We provide background music for businesses, uh, acoustical analysis and treatments, uh, sound and video systems, we design them and put them in. I was first diagnosed with Stage 4 Colon Cancer in November of 2014, and it had metastasized to two mitts that were in my liver. You go through the stages of shock, uh, disbelief, a little of anger, and then you start focusing on healing, and what the next steps are, and in that case it was the beginning of chemotherapy.

So the doctor had said that I had less than a 5% chance of survival and that I needed to continue with the chemotherapy. And after the fifth round, I had what I thought were three heart attacks, and one day the knocked me to my knees. And that was really a tough time. And then we went to see the oncologist again and talked to her. And I vividly remember her comments as Mr. Forsyth, I'm just trying to save your life. And she wanted me to continue, and I looked at Sandie and Sandie looked at me, and the thought was that if I had less than a 5% chance of survival, why wouldn't I try some of these other treatments that were available that we had discovered and made the decision to terminate the relationship with the oncologist and move in a different direction. So my wife, Sandy, was sitting in the waiting room during my first surgery, and my oldest son, Josh, sent her a link to a Swiss study, uh, on mistletoe therapy that she found very interesting...through that discovery process, Sandie found out about Believe Big, Ivelisse's Story was there....and that was very encouraging to me because she had been through a similar process with her journey. And that was probably the very beginning of our getting to know Believe Big.

Believe Big had a series of doctors that are listed who were trained in mistletoe therapy nationally. Living in Alabama, we don't have a lot of naturopaths here. Probably less than two or three available nearby. So having access to naturopaths out of state, which we were able to determine through Believe Big's website and information was tremendous. Today I'm still doing the mistletoe therapy, but I don't inject as often as in the first three years. I'm on a maintenance dose now, so I do the mistletoe therapy once or twice a week. And I still continue to do two rounds of nutritional supplements. once in the morning and one in the evening.

The American Medical Association and the doctors say that I'm now cancer free. And it's been just over five years since my last surgery in November of 2016. So when I think about Believe Big, they were the beginning and then today, a continuation of my life and my experience and how I share information with others who are having issues with cancer or their family members. So Believe Big for me is a resource for cancer patients to consider alternative and integrative therapies.

I fully recognize God's gift of healing, and that is very important to me now. I also have a goal in life to love and appreciate my wife, who is my primary caregiver. And I think that she is the key to my survival. And I love her very much for that. Part of my new goals are to share my journey with other cancer patients. And I have to say God has blessed Believe Big, and they blessed my life and and it's I have really learned to appreciate the great creation that is the human body that God developed and its ability to heal.

In December of 2019, Micah was diagnosed with stage IV adrenal cortical carcinoma, a very rare and aggressive cancer. It is not typically seen in children. In the beginning without a diagnosis our surgeon felt it was important to remove it, we agreed. After an intense surgery and waiting two weeks for results from multiple hospitals we received his shocking diagnosis. My first response was "God, as long as I can hear you and know You are with me, I know I can do this."

He started long inpatient chemo treatments in Tampa, but within two treatments God was clear that we would be selling our property, and relocating our family of nine to Collierville, TN to be close to St. Jude, where there were research doctors who had successfully treated ACC a few times.

I read a few books that changed the way I saw cancer and I realized his entire body and spirit needed to be supported. We weren't fighting against his confused cells; we were focusing on healing them. I used essential oils regularly, prayed over his body each night to clear his energy from the trauma of the day, we exercised, went outside and laughter became part of Micah's treatment plan. We were away from his siblings and Dad for over 120 days, and it was HARD, but we focused on singing and laughing as much as we could.

I looked into Intravenous Vitamin C (IVC) and mistletoe but while in treatment at St. Jude they asked me to wait. During his last month he was so sick and on several anti-nausea medications. We hired Dr. Dagmara Beine, a pediatric integrative oncology specialist from Zuza's Way, who helped us dose his THC/CBD, and we worked with Rylie's Smile for better education about cannabis and children. Micah's nausea stopped immediately!! He was able to stop the anti-nausea medicines that same week, during what is supposed to be the hardest month on daily chemo.

Once we finished Micah's treatment of IV chemo, we started the mistletoe and IVC. We work with Dr. Beine on a lifetime approach for Micah, because he has a TP53 gene mutation. It's not a quick fix or a sprint, it's a life journey. The oncologists eradicate the cancer and then send patients home to a wait and see approach. For us that wasn't an option. We have a full year scheduled of healing for Micah and then there are things he'll do forever to ensure health and wholeness.

I receive a lot of messages from parents who have wanted to explore integrative care, but they were told not to. They were told it doesn't matter what their children eat. My advice to anyone is to do all you can for your child in regard to integrative care. Hire an integrative doctor that works with pediatric oncology, find other parents and groups who are pioneering, read all of the studies and most importantly push fear aside and find your peace. Knowing that you're doing what's best for your child is key. Don't be afraid to disagree with doctors. Oncologists are trained to eradicate the cancer, and that's a huge part of it but not at all the only goal.

For a while I felt like a salmon swimming upstream (especially in the pediatric oncology world) and I noticed we weren't alone. Having foundations like Believe Big empowered us to keep going. We needed that community of encouragement and we feel God has been very intentional to give us all that we needed for Micah's healing journey, Believe Big was one of those gifts to us.

We Celebrated 10 Years of Hope

Our annual fundraising dinner raised $210,101. Given the challenges and changes that the pandemic brought, our team quickly pivoted from our in-person event to a successful virtual event. We were in awe and grateful for the ways God showed up to provide throughout the year of 2021.

Launched Food for Thought

Nutrition plays an important role in cancer at all stages – prevention or risk reduction, treatment, and post-treatment. Food for Thought was created to give individuals a simplified look for incorporating healthy practices and dietary therapies into their daily routine.

Society of Integrative Oncology Conference

Believe Big was proud to be a part of The Society of Integrative Oncology International Conference. Ivelisse spoke on a panel with physicians from the NIH and the Mayo Clinic on advanced cancers. It was also a great opportunity to learn about new findings in integrative oncology.
